DIG training is a citizen participation workshop which is one of disaster illustration exercises, using the residential map, etc., to group, to check features of the topography, past disasters and dangers, disaster prevention resources, etc. After writing the necessary information on the map as a painting picture, we present a "disaster hypothetical card" and discuss the remedy within the group.

Since there is no fixed answer, such as distribution method of drinking water, coping with fire, order of priority of critical injury of injured people. Ideas that can overcome the crisis with free thought without criticizing various opinions We will announce and announce.

From day to day, if you think about it will be a great force in emergencies.

"Shake-out training" practices three safety behaviors, "DROP!", "COVER!" and "HOLD ON!" with a whistle as a signal.
